initialed the paper and would send me a copy of it when he could get a clean copy. He emphasized that he had not concurred in the paper. I want to look into this in some detail. It doesn't make any sense to me that the Agency should be unable to finance additional training of this same type [REDACTED] and at the same time be able to finance a much more expensive training facility elsewhere.

2. [REDACTED] John Bross and others from the Office of the Comptroller to discuss our conflict between staffing requirements levied on the Office of Personnel and the limitation on funds available to pay these personnel during Fiscal Year 1964. We all recognized that this was a most serious and a most urgent problem and that we needed policy guidance on it very soon. (John is working up a paper which he will coordinate with us, and he and I will present the problem to General Carter probably sometime next week.)

a couple of instances came out about which I had never heard before. He was very defensive about the reporting system and harked back on his familiar theme of telling him what I wanted. 5. Dr. Tietjen called to give me a brief report on [REDACTED] John is not in good health and is really not qualified for a position of responsibility justifying a grade GS-18. He definitely could qualify for disability retirement but is not inclined to comply. With Dr. Tietjen's agreement I telephoned Dick Helms and asked him to see Dr. Tietjen so that he could be fully briefed on this case.
